

4 Ways to Help Your Clients Ease Workers' Inflation Concerns

1

Understand employees' needs

Help your clients survey employees to understand their benefits needs. That helps you and your clients offer the health and financial benefits that will help employees save the most money.

2

Review benefits

Review the use of current benefits by employees and dependents. Employees may select benefit plans they rarely use, or choose the same benefits year after year, not understanding all the available options.

3

Refresh plans and resources

Recommend benefit options that employees want, like stand-alone dental and vision plans, at budget-friendly coverage levels. Offering financial well-being resources like student loan repayment programs can help employees cope with inflation and economic concerns.

4

Explain coverage and ways to save

Design clear benefits communication plans to make it easy for workers to know their coverage and use their plans. Review these tips on how to enhance employee benefits education. Explain the value of preventive dental and vision exams, which can help them stay healthy and save money.

Did you know?

40% of employees surveyed plan to reduce the amount they spend on benefits.

Voluntary plans are a great way for employers to offer benefits that fit employees' needs and financial goals.

Learn more about how to help employees save money with benefits.

Help Employees Save Money

Consider a student loan repayment plan that helps pay off current debt with the option to use 401(k) match funds that your client already provides. College savings and tuition reimbursement benefits can meet a variety of financial needs.

Find out more about Ameritas dental and vision employee benefits. Join the Ameritas team.